

Homa Arkani

Sam Eggermont

Is it Eurus or Zephyrus?

Refers to the wind of culture and history which serves as a metaphor for the way cultural and historical elements shape and influence the world. In this exhibition, Homa Arkani integrates the works of two of her heroes, the 16th-century Bruegel and the 13th-century Rumi, the poet, using humor, proverbs, and grotesque imagination. Her works focus on the human experience and address socio-cultural concerns, inspired by the recent protests in Iran. Sam Eggermont has moved away from a critical self and seeks to integrate multiple elements, originally from the Middle East, towards a script. The work, he called them letters, are a mixture of cultural and historical elements, layered together as if time were an artificial layer. He would like to dedicate this show in honor of Zvi Goldstein.
